Director Ken Loach turns down Turin Film Festival award

Gesture is act of solidarity with fired film museum workers

21 November, 19:29

(ANSA) - Rome, November 21 - British film director Ken Loach on Wednesday declined an award from the Turin Film Festival in a gesture of solidarity with workers at the city's film museum whose jobs were outsourced when they refused to accept salary cuts. In a letter written to the festival's organizers, Loach said he could not accept the award because he disagreed with the practice of "outsourcing services done by workers with the lowest salaries". In the letter to festival organizers, who had awarded Loach the Gran Torino Prize, the director wrote: "It is with great sorrow that I find myself forced to refuse the prize which has been awarded by the Turin Film Festival, a prize which I would have been very happy to accept, for me and for all those who have worked on our films". Loach explained that the "recipe" whereby the lowest-paid services are outsourced to save money, which often leads bidding companies to cut costs and fire employees, "is a recipe destined to generate conflict". In Turin, the company that runs the city's film museum recently outsourced security and cleaning services. Some employees of the film museum subsequently lost their jobs and those with the lowest salaries were fired after refusing to accept salary cuts.

Loach said he expected that, in this case, "the museum would dialogue with the workers and their unions, guarantee the re-hiring of the fired employees and rethink its outsourcing strategy". "We made a film on this very topic, Bread and Roses," Loach said. "How could I not respond to a request for solidarity from the workers who were fired after having fought for their rights? Having accepted the award and limited myself to a few critical remarks would have been weak and hypocritical behavior"

Agency reports 85% of Italians admit to buying fake goods

Consumers are driven by 'need to save'

21 November, 13:01

(ANSA) - Rome, November 21 - National consumer agency Unc said in a report released Wednesday that 85% of Italians admit to buying counterfeit products to save money, while 62% say they cannot always distinguish a fake from an original.

The survey, 'What do you think of counterfeiting?' showed that the main motivation driving consumers to counterfeit products is the "need to save money," Unc General Secretary Massimiliano Dona said. Statistics also show that the economic crisis has hit the fake-goods market and that production has dropped, the report said.

"Counterfeit producers are feeling the ups and downs of the market as everyone else is," Dona said.

However, Dona said that consumers must "always keep in mind that counterfeiting is a constant threat to the country's economy and for consumers"

Italian local governments in G2 migrant citizenship campaign

Group wants changes to existing laws

16 November, 18:44

(ANSA) - Rome, November 16 - The national association of Italian town and city councils (ANCI) on Friday stepped up efforts to inform second-generation immigrants born in Italy of their citizenship rights by relaunching an awareness-raising campaign, pending long called-for changes to Italy's citizenship laws.

'18 anni in Comune', which is a play on words meaning 18 years in common, and 18 years in the council, aims to press local authorities on the need to inform children from migrant families who were born in Italy and who have turned 18 of their right to request Italian citizenship before their 19th birthday.

After that date this group has to follow the same channels as foreigners not born on Italian soil.

Current Italian law enshrines the principle of ius sanguinis, according to which citizenship is determined exclusively by blood relationship.

However many in Italy, including ANCI, have long been campaigning for a change in the law to accommodate the principle of ius soli - citizenship as a result of place of birth - in recognition of the anomaly that growing numbers of foreign residents have been born, raised and educated in Italy and consider themselves to be Italian but do not have the same citizenship rights as their Italian counterparts.

So far 358 municipalities have adhered to the campaign and around 640 second-generation immigrants have obtained Italian citizenship as a result.

The campaign is run together with the children's aid agency Save the Children and the network of second-generation immigrants, G2.

Southern youth smoke more, northerners drink more in Italy

Both equally susceptible to STDs, study finds

15 November, 18:07

(ANSA) - Rome, November 15 - A study Thursday showed young southern Italians smoke, change partners and consume marijuana more often than their peers in the north, while northerners drink alcohol, consume cocaine and stick with their partners more often than the rest of the country. The results were part of a study by the government-sponsored Androlife campaign, presented Thursday at a convention on sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) in Lecce. The study showed that people between 18 and 35 in both the north and south are equally susceptible to STDs. "The data are very important given STDs are on the rise in Italy," said Carlo Foresta, director of the department of reproductive pathology at the University of Padua and president of STD prevention group SIAMS. "It's clear that sexual behavior is much freer among young people in the south, who tend to have a higher number of partners". The study showed that young people in the south tended to use protection only 50% of the time. Youths in the south also tend to engage in less physical activity and suffer from a higher obesity rate, while northerners are more active and slimmer. "Obesity can be considered a reproductive risk factor among youth," said Foresta. "It is often the cause of diseases such as hypogonadism," which is diminished functional activity of the testes and ovaries.

Recipe—Simple snack foods

Ingredients:

- Camembert cheese
- garlic
- Olive oil
- Pepper (fresh ground)
- Parmesan cheese
- Fresh pizza bread
- New boiled potatoes

Camembert cheese goo goodness

This is a simple yet tasty dish that can be prepared before hand or done in a mo. Take a camembert (the one in the wooden container). Remove the plastic covering and replace in the wooden box. Take a knife and puncture some small holes in the top of the cheese. Medium slice some garlic so you can put the slivers into the holes you have just made. (approx 20 should do it). Pour over a little olive oil and grinded black pepper.

Pre heat your oven to 200 degrees. Once hot add the camembert with the lid on and wait till it starts to smoke a little in the oven. Remove, take off top and use the bread or new potatoes to dig into the molten cheese and devour. That's it, don't forget the try the skin part, that's where the true magic happens. Enjoy

November 16 touted as day to fete UNESCO-approved fare

15 November, 15:16

(ANSA) &#8211; Roma, November 15 &#8211; Senators on Thursday presented a bill aiming to promote and give value to the traditional Mediterranean diet that is at the heart of much Italian cuisine.

The proposed legislation includes making November 16 a national day dedicated to the nutritional recommendation based on a high consumption of olive oil, unrefined cereals, fresh fruit and vegetables and legumes, a moderate consumption of fish and dairy products and a low consumption of meat and meat products. November 16 is the day in 2010 on which the Paris-based United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) inscribed the Mediterranean diet on its intangible cultural heritage list on the request of Italy, Greece, Spain and Morocco. The bill also provides for a special logo designating products typical of the acclaimed dietary regime and a special committee for its defence and promotion, chaired by the agriculture minister and including representatives of the ministries of health, culture, foreign affairs, education and the environment. The proposed legislation also aims to promote the Mediterranean diet in school canteens.

Candlelabra of Calabria

Italian Anousim – Celebrating Shabbat with Unique Candlelabra

For thousands of Italians who live in the southern Italian region of Calabria, the island of Sicily and the Aeolian Islands as well as for many more Italian Americans and Italian Canadians, connecting family traditions with an ancient Jewish heritage can be little more than a lucky guess. But as we continue to search for our lost and hidden Jewish roots, one ritual item, the Shabbat candlelabra offers an important clue.

The triple candlelabra pictured here is Rabbi Barbara Aiello's family heirloom. Her grandparents descended from a Calabrian crypto-Jewish background where a three-branched candlelabra was integral for the family Shabbat table.

"The middle candle served as the "shamus" or helping candle, and just as Jews use the shamus to light the eight candles on the Chanukah memorah, a shamus candle was used to light the two candles for Shabbat," says Rabbi Barbara, who now lives and works in Calabria where she searches for hidden traditions such as these.

The peacock motif offers another Jewish clue. For the Jews of Calabria, the peacock was an important element in Jewish design. Originating with the Kabbalists, the Jewish mystics of medieval times, it is the male peacock's special feather configuration that is reminiscent of the Kabbalistic "third eye." This symbol connects with the message of Shabbat by reminding us that with the "third eye" we can see into a person's soul and thus bring peace to the world. Families in Serrastretta, the tiny village where Rabbi Barbara organized "Ner Tamid del Sud, the first active synagogue in Calabria in 500 years since Inquisition times, recall the three branched candlelabra at their own Friday evening dinner table. Some recall a beautiful ritual where the matron of the house first lit the middle "shamus" candle, removed it and then passed it to the youngest family member. Each person around the table had her/his own personal candle which was kindled by passing the shamus candle from person to person. Finally the shamus candle returned to "Mama" who then kindled the last two candles, the lights of Shabbat.

Fashion: ethical brand Cangiari, from Calabria to Israel

fashion for social change, at Tel Aviv's Beit Ha'ir Museum

30 OCTOBER, 16:32

(ANSAmEd) - TEL AVIV, OCTOBER 30 - An exhibition called 'manoAmano' (handTohand), on fashion as a tool for social change, opened yesterday at Tel Aviv's Beit Ha'ir Museum. Organized by the Italian Cultural Institute, the Italian embassy and Beit Ha'r curator, Ayelet Bitan-Shlonsky, the exhibition focused on Italian fashion brand Cangiari, which was established under the tutorship of entrepreneur Santo Versace to improve the economic status of Calabria, an impoverished, organized crime-ridden region in southern Italy.

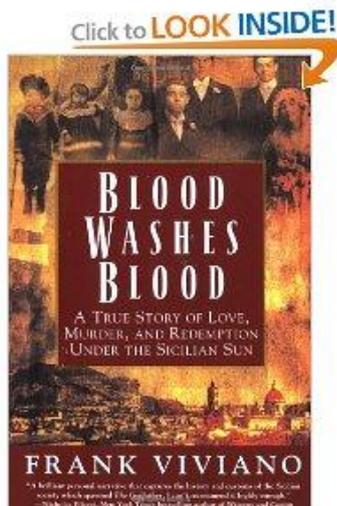

The exhibition explored Cangiari's work process, which uses local materials such as yarn and silk, its fabrics hand-woven by craftswomen according to a Calabrese tradition that sinks its roots in the ancient Greek and Byzantine periods, as well as their tools, weaving equipment, and the final product: contemporary high-quality designs, which were shown during Italian Fashion Week. Cangiari, which means 'change' in the Calabrian and Sicilian dialects, was founded in 2009 by the GOEL Cooperative, whose mission it is to combat organized crime in Calabria by promoting sustainable, ethical, ecological and non-violent business practices.

"This is our first ethical brand in the fashion sector," GOEL President Vincenzo Linarello said at yesterday's opening. "This event transmits an extraordinary image of Italy and of the Calabria region," added Italian Ambassador Francesco Maria Talo', who also attended. (ANSAmEd).

BOOK REVIEW

BLOOD WASHES BLOOD

Against the sweeping backdrop of western Sicily, in a riveting seven-year quest, Frank Viviano pieces together his own harrowing ancestral history of betrayal and redemption. His take is haunted, from its violent opening to its stunning climax, by an ancient Sicilian proverb, Lu sangu lava lu sangu, "Blood washes blood": the torrent of unforgiving vengeance that flows from an unforgivable offense.

Viviano's great-great grandfather was a legendary bandit who traveled the countryside of Sicily by night in the robes of a friar and was known as "the Monk." His brutal murder has remained shrouded in mystery for four generations. Until now.

Populated by an extraordinary cast of nineteenth-century Robin Hood brigands and twentieth-century underworld bosses, here is a true-life Godfather, in which past and present finally merge into a single story with a shattering climax that ultimately changes the way the author views his immigrant family's complex legacy -- and himself.

Italy, China sign deals worth $1.27 billion

The six deals included agreements between Chinese telecoms giant Huawei and Italian Internet provider Fastweb for $557 million and between China Everbright and Chinese-owned Italy-based yacht company Ferretti for $480 million.

ROME: Italian and Chinese firms signed deals worth $1.27 billion (984 million euros) on Wednesday in Rome at talks attended by Prime Minister Mario Monti and senior Chinese politician Jia Qinglin.

The six deals included agreements between Chinese telecoms giant Huawei and Italian Internet provider Fastweb for $557 million and between China Everbright and Chinese-owned Italy-based yacht company Ferretti for $480 million.

"These agreements show that many sectors of the Italian economy can attract foreign investors, raising the growth potential of the country and expanding its International exchanges," Monti was quoted as saying in a statement.

Jia is chairman of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, the country's top advisory body.

Monti has been seeking to raise Italy's status among international investors.

After a visit to Qatar earlier this month, Italy and Qatar set up a two-billion-euro joint venture for making investments in Italy.

The two countries are set to sign another deal soon for a one-billion-euro fund for small and medium-sized enterprises, the government said.

Amanda Knox releases title and book cover for $4million memoir 'Waiting to be Heard'

Amanda Knox, the American student who was cleared last year of the 2007 murder of her British roommate Meredith Kercher, has released the title and cover of her upcoming memoir.

4:26AM GMT 29 Nov 2012

The book, detailing Ms Knox's four years in a prison in Perugia, Italy, will be titled "Waiting to be Heard", publisher HarperCollins announced yesterday.

It will come out April 30, two months later than originally scheduled. The date was changed after a court in Italy scheduled a March 25 hearing for the prosecution's appeal of Ms Knox's acquittal in the murder of Ms Kercher.

The two exchange students were sharing a house in Perugia in 2007 when Ms Kercher was found murdered in her bedroom. Ms Knox and her then-boyfriend Raffaele Sollecito were convicted of the murders, but the ruling was dramatically overturned last year.

Ms Knox, 25, returned to her native Seattle, Washington, after the acquittal. The book deal, announced in February, was reportedly worth $4 million.

Cannabis cultivation increases 'vertiginously' in Italy

Overall drug consumption on the wane

15 November, 16:44

(ANSA) - Rome, November 15 - The illegal cultivation of cannabis in Italy has "increased vertiginously" even as overall drug consumption has fallen, the head of Italy's anti-drug department said on Thursday.

Seizures of illegal marijuana crops have risen by 1,290%, according to Giovanni Serpelloni.

The national anti-drug chief added that drug consumption "has generally been falling for several years, albeit by varying amounts, particularly with respect to certain substances which thankfully are used little in Italy, such as ketamine and ecstasy" but that it is necessary to "maintain a high level of alert". To this end the fight against drug trafficking, distribution and illegal cannabis cultivation must be kept up and intensified and efforts stepped up to monitor "the online distribution not only of narcotics but also of counterfeit pharmaceuticals which are often taken at the same time as drugs particularly by young internet surfers", Serpelloni said.

The EU Observatory for drugs and drug addiction said on Thursday in its 2012 report that the continent was becoming a major producer of cannabis and that the drug is consumed by 1% of adults in Europe every day.

InCalabria are southern Italy's most respected and experienced property consultants. We pride ourselves on focusing on quality Calabria property that is within a convenient 30 minute drive of our office, enabling us to deliver the highest standards of personal service. What's more, we guarantee the lowest price on any property on our books.

If you like Italy, you'll love Calabria in the stunning south of this sun-drenched country: unspoilt, untouched and now more accessible to overseas property buyers than ever before.

Calabria is still one of the most affordable places in southern Europe today. All our properties are within walking distance from the coast or have stunning sea views to rival the best the Amalfi Coast has to offer.

Italy also has one of the most stable real estate markets in Europe. This is largely due to the Italians own love of property. As many as 80% of Italians own a property and many of these have a second home here in the south where long sunshine-filled summers are assured.

Italian government continuing with work despite crisis

Business as usual, despite speculation of Monti resignation

07 December, 16:24

(ANSA) - Italian Justice Minister Paola Severino said the government was ploughing ahead with its work commitments, unaffected by speculation Prime Minister Mario Monti may not have enough backing to continue at the helm of the nation.

Italy has been rife with speculation of an imminent resignation by Italian Premier Mario Monti after Silvio Berlusconi's center-right PdL party withdrew its support for him in two votes.

"The government's commitment is in no way affected by the current atmosphere", Severino said, adding that the ministers were continuing to work "with great serenity".

Italians resort to 'survival strategies' as crisis bites

Families sell gold, use a bicycle and grow vegetables to get by

07 December, 15:16

(ANSA) - Rome, December 7 - Italy is characterised by a "parallel discontinuity" with the political institutions engaged in putting the country's financial house in order on the one hand and economic and social institutions having to apply "frantic survival strategies" on the other, according to the annual report of the social statistics institute Censis published Friday.

Some 2.5 million families have resorted to selling their gold or other precious items over the last two years, the statistics institute said. Further, 85% have eliminated waste and excesses, 73% look for special offers and 62.8% have cut back on travel to save petrol.

There has also been an increase in the use of bicycles to get around and 2.7 million Italians now grow their own vegetables for daily consumption. Consumer spending fell by 2.8% in the first three months of 2012 and by nearly 4% in the second three months, fuelled by the tendency to renounce or delay spending in an attempt to save money.
